I loved that we got to see Maria Goepfert Mayer: Physicist Jake and Cally's points of view; it definitely helped to know what they were both thinking. Certainly the young people of today have mastered the use of technology and are capable of solving complex scientific and mathematical problems, but who and what do these serve if they cannot think for themselves. Cross-discipline communication should help us to move forward in this methodological debate, though in the end the subject matter and specific research question will lead to the appropriate comparative approach, not the other way round.
